Jamie has his say on warming

GLOBAL warming is a hot topic for Westminister resident Jamie Blackwood, who recently took part in the World Wide Views on Global Warming conference held in Sydney by the University of Technology.

The two-day consultation involved 100 Australians meeting to discuss their views on the topic of global warming and answer a variety of questions.

The participants were split across 17 tables, with each table having to come up with recommendations on different aspects of issues discussed.

Their views will be presented to the UN Climate talks in Copenhagen in December.
